

Fetal Burial Rights Law and the States!

To our knowledge only 9 States have such legislation on the books:

Minnesota
Missouri
South Dakota
Illinois
Massachusetts
Arkansas
Nebraska
Florida
Colorado

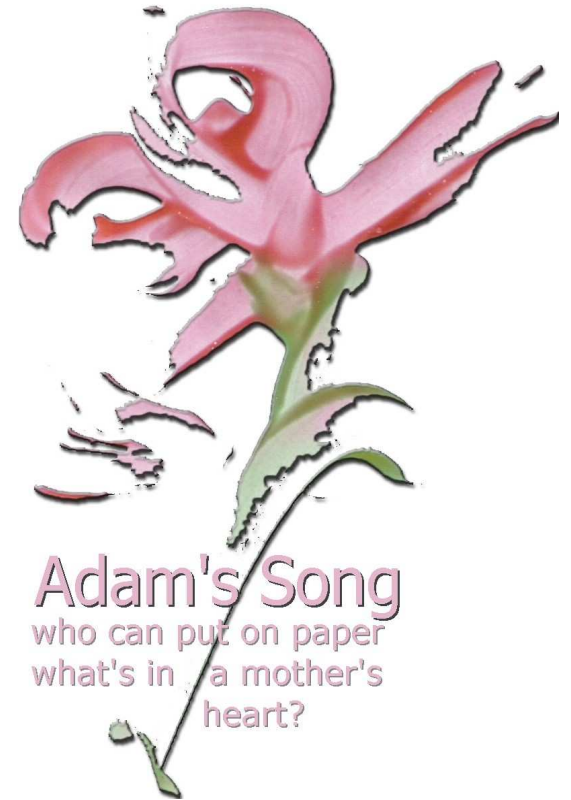

Although it has been presented that some other states (Iowa, Indiana, Kansas, Rhode Island and Virginia) may have similar laws, we cannot confirm this and our searches have turned up nothing.

All other states are presumed to have no protections under the law at this time.

Fetal Burial Rights, Child and Pregnancy Loss Support

Nationally an estimated 1 Million (20 percent) pregnancies are known to end in miscarriage. As many pregnancies are never known, it is quite probable that the true number is nearly twice that number. Most miscarriages occur within the first 12 weeks of pregnancy.

AdamsSong.net's Miscarriage Information!

What is a miscarriage?

A miscarriage, simply put, is a pregnancy loss prior to the 20th week. After this time it is referred to as a stillbirth.

How often do miscarriages happen?

It is estimated that as many as 3 out of every 4 pregnancies may end in miscarriage or stillbirth. Sometimes, this is before a woman is even aware she has conceived, which makes this number harder to estimate.

Different types of miscarriage:

Threatened abortion Cramps or bleeding along with back pain are present. Many pregnancies at this point will still be carried to term.

Incomplete abortion

Part of the tissue from a miscarriage is still inside the uterus. Sometimes a D&C (Dilation and Curettage or scraping of uterus) is necessary to remove tissue so that infection does not set in.

Inevitable abortion

As the term implies, it is when the miscarriage is unavoidable. Nothing will stop the process.

Missed abortion

The fetus has died but has not yet been expelled. Sometimes a D&C (Dilation and Curettage or scraping of uterus) is necessary to remove tissue so that infection does not set in.

Our Law in Nebraska

With today's tests, women are finding out earlier and earlier about their pregnancies and dreams are well on their way by the time a loss like this is experienced.

Compounding this pain is the fact that in many states there are no legal protections for parents who wish to bury the remains of their unborn when such an event occurs especially if the pregnancy has not advanced beyond 20 weeks.

With the aid of State Senator Chip Maxwell, our law was made a priority bill and passed without opposition the following legislative session.

Now in Nebraska a woman has the right to the remains of any product of conception regardless of the duration of pregnancy. She must be informed of her rights at the time of treatment and has several days for a "remorse period" where the remains will be kept if she decides she DOES want to bury them after initially declining this right.

Despite initially seeing the hospital system in our state as an adversary, they also joined in to suggest more help in the law than we originally were asking.

We want to see this kind of common sense/compassionate legislation in all 50 states.

Become a state representative

You can help make parental rights a reality by becoming a state representative. Devote some time to finding out what the laws are in your state.

1.-Are parents allowed to bury the remains of their child in the event of miscarriage?

2.-Do those rights cover parents from conception to birth or are they limited to certain time periods?

3.-Are parents notified of their rights or is the burden on them to find out their rights during these difficult times?

Let us know how we can help!
